

Discover Ways to Serve Others

To brainstorm blessing opportunities, spend a few minutes writing down answers to the following questions. Try to think of people and organizations in our community you want to help out.

1. What are the names of widows you know?
2. What are the names of single-parent families you know?
3. Who do you know that is struggling with unemployment?
4. Who do you know that is struggling financially?
5. Who do you know that is ill?
6. Who do you know that is suffering loss?
7. What are the names of elderly people or couples you know?
8. Who are people new to your neighborhood? What are their names?
9. What are some non-profits you know about and like?
10. What are the names of other people or families you know that are hurting or struggling for reasons not previously listed?

Decide

Whether you are serving as a small group, a family, or on your own, begin by praying for direction. Also, don't let overwhelming ideas keep you from taking action. Sometimes by scaling down your idea you can better accomplish what you came up with.

Research

You or someone in your group or family do some homework to research an organization and / or coordinate the effort you are planning.
